Percussionist Tatsuya Nakatani has been making frequent annual visits to New Orleans since 2004, performing over 20 concerts in the Crescent City in a range of settings and venues from solo drum recitals to duets and trios with acoustic musicians (James Singleton, Helen Gillet, and Jeff Albert, to name a few) to his crackling trio with electric guitarists Donald Miller and Rob Cambre. On March 3rd he will convene a special edition of his most personalized project, the Nakatani Gong Orchestra, which will feature Tatsuya leading an ensemble of New Orleans musicians playing his carefully-selected arsenal of gongs and tam-tams, bowed and struck to create a riveting and powerful spectrum of sound.

ABOUT CHURCH OF THE FRIENDLY GHOST:

Church of the Friendly Ghost is an arts organization supporting creative expression and counter-culture community. Established in the fall of 2003, COTFG has presented approximately one thousand events to date including concerts, art exhibitions, workshops, film screenings, and other cultural excursions. The original venue location was inside a re-purposed church, hence the name, but it is not in fact a 'church' in conventional terms.

Church Of The Friendly Ghost is delighted to present for Austin the work of master percussion artist Tatsuya Nakatani.

At 8pm on March 8th 2013, at The Off Center, Nakatani will perform solo, and then accompanied by Austinites: Matthew Burnett, Chelsea Moore, Josh Ronsen, Derrick Fore, Ellen Hutchison, Arthur Simone, Thomas Fang, and Greg Cooksey as the Nakatani Gong Orchestra (N.G.O.)

The music of N.G.O. creates a metallic temple of deep harmonies. The gongs are bowed and softly struck by mallets to produce sounds that defy musical categorization. A forty inch gong creates extreme low-frequency wave forms that cross-vibrate with the tones of the other gongs of varying sizes. The result is a sound which emanates from the deepest frequency pool and is felt in the very depths of the body.

Don't miss the opportunity to see this special concert!
